Food scarce, rescue efforts underway in Bahamas following 2-day Dorian hit

Devastation after Hurricane Dorian hit Grand Bahama Island in the Bahamas, Sept. 4, 2019.

"One of the greatest national crises in our history," PM says; at last seven dead.

Survivors of Hurricane Dorian on Wednesday picked through the wreckage of homes ripped open by fierce winds, struggled to fuel generators and queued for food after one of the most powerful Caribbean storms on record devastated parts of the Bahamas.

The most damaging storm to strike the island nation, Dorian killed at least seven people, but the scope of the destruction and a humanitarian crisis was still coming into focus as aerial video of the Abaco Islands in the northern Bahamas showed wide devastation.

Dozens of people took to Facebook to search for missing loved ones, and aid agencies estimated that tens of thousands of people out of the Bahamas population of 400,000 would need food and other support.

"We are in the midst of one of the greatest national crises in our country's history," Bahamas Prime Minister Hubert Minnis told a news conference. "We can expect more deaths to be recorded. This is just preliminary information."

LaQuez Williams, pastor at Jubilee Cathedral in Grand Bahama, opened the church as a shelter for about 150 people. As the storm ground on, Williams said that from the higher ground of the church he could see people on their rooftops seeking refuge.

"They were calling for help, but you could not go out to reach," Williams said. "It was very difficult because you felt helpless."

Aerial video of Great Abaco Island showed miles of flooded neighborhoods littered with upturned boats and shipping containers scattered like toys. Many buildings had walls or roofs partly ripped off.

Tens of thousands out of Bahamas' population of 400,000 need food, support.

With many telephones down on Abaco and Grand Bahama islands, residents posted lists of missing loved ones on social media.

Residents of coastal Florida, Georgia and South Carolina were preparing for Dorian's approach on Wednesday, with the National Hurricane Center warning it could make landfall in South or North Carolina on Thursday. REUTERS

Automakers to install alerts to avoid hot car deaths in US

2 Major automakers said on Wednesday they have agreed to equip nearly all U.S. vehicles with systems to remind motorists of passengers in the back seat, by model year 2025, in an effort to avoid deaths of young children left behind in hot cars. The announcement on so-called rear seat reminder systems comes as the U.S. Congress has been debating making it a requirement for new cars. Lawmakers say more than 800 children in parked vehicles have died from heatstroke in the United States over the last two decades. U.S. regulators say 53 died last year, the most in two decades. The 20 automakers taking part represent nearly 98 percent of all U.S. vehicle sales and committed to include audible and visual alerts on vehicles by the 2025 model year, or a year later if a redesign is involved. The automakers include General Motors, Ford , Volkswagen, Toyota, Hyundai and Honda. REUTERS

Bettman, 4 others, named to US Hockey Hall of Fame

3 NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman, Tim Thomas, Brian Gionta, Neal Henderson and Krissy Wendell comprise the 2019 class of the U.S. Hockey Hall of Fame, USA Hockey announced on Wednesday. The quintet will be honored at the 2019 U.S. Hockey Hall of Fame induction celebration on Dec. 12 in Washington. "It's truly a remarkable class," said Jim Smith, president of USA Hockey. "Each of the five inductees have their own unique and immeasurable contribution to our great game. They're extremely deserving of the highest hockey honor in our country and we look forward to formally enshrining them into the Hall in December." Bettman became the NHL's first commissioner on Feb. 1, 1993. The league has expanded from 24 to 32 teams under his watch with attendance growing by an average of 7 million fans per season. City sees 3rd shooting incident targeting Philly police in 3 weeks

A plainclothes officer was shot at by an unknown gunman earlier this week.

On Tuesday, a plainclothes officer sitting in an unmarked car near Kingsessing Avenue and South Sanford Street and was shot at by an unknown gunman, officials said.

The gunman fired a semi-automatic weapon, hitting the officer's vehicle twice. The officer was not injured, according to multiple reports. Fox reported that the suspect shot off eight rounds.

Officials told outlets that they have leads, but as of Wednesday afternoon, there were no arrests.

Acting Philadelphia Police Commissioner Christine Coulter told CBS, "They have someone who is a person of interest not in custody. They may know who may be connected to the ongoing violence."

CBS reported that police are investigating a potential connection between this incident and a homicide that occurred last week in the same area.

The gunman is described as 6 feet 1 inch and wearing jeans and a grey hoodie. Police reports state that the gunman escaped in an alleyway.

News of this incident comes within a week of a standoff that occurred in Philly, where officials arrested five people for shooting at two plainclothes officers.

Prior to this incident, there was also an Aug. 14 standoff that left six officers injured.

Coulter told Fox that this incident "highlights how dangerous the job is whether they know you are a police officer or not."

> "You're putting yourself in harm's way when you are out doing investigations. It's a testament to [those] who still go out every day and do the job knowing... people are often willing to fire."

She added, "You're putting yourself in harm's way when you are out doing investigations. It's a testament to the men and women who still go out every day and do the job knowing…that there are people who are often willing to fire — whether it's police officers or citizens."

Additionally, she said, "That level of gun violence is what we really need to get to the root of."

BRIEF

Nine hurt in West Philly police chase

Nine people were injured late Tuesday during a high-speed police chase through West Philly that ended with an SUV slamming into a SEPTA bus.

The Pennsylvania State Police started the pursuit in Montgomery County at around 10 p.m. The chase culminated in the Mantua neighborhood when the SUV that was being pursued by cops crashed into the bus at 37th and Spring Garden streets. The SUV was allegedly racing west on Spring Garden Street, and it crashed into the left rear of a Route 31 bus, the Inquirer reported. Route 31 one travels between City Hall and 76th Street.

According to the Inquirer, one person was in critical condition after being trapped in the wreckage. Additionally, five passengers in the SEPTA bus and the bus operator were injured. Two men in the SUV were also injured, according to reports.

State police told NBC that they were assisting local officers from the Upper Merion area who were pursuing robbery suspects.

Two suspects were arrested at the scene.

It was unclear how many people were on the bus at the time of the crash. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

Google's YouTube to pay $170 million penalty for collecting data on children

Service used cookies without consent.

Google, which is owned by Alphabet Inc., and its YouTube video service will pay $170 million to settle allegations that it broke federal law by collecting personal information about children, the Federal Trade Commission said on Wednesday.

YouTube had been accused of tracking viewers of children's channels using cookies without parental consent and using those cookies to target millions of dollars in advertisements to those viewers.

The settlement with the FTC and the New York attorney general's office, which will receive $34 million, is the largest since a law banning collecting information about children under age 13 came into effect in 1998. The law was revised in 2013 to include "cookies," used to track a person's internet viewing habits.

It is also small compared with the company's revenues. Alphabet, which generates about 85 percent of its revenue from sales of ad space and ad technology, in July reported total second-quarter revenue of $38.9 billion.

YouTube said in a statement on Wednesday that in four months it would begin treating all data collected from people watching children's content as if it came from a child. "This means that we will limit data collection and use on videos made for kids only to what is needed to support the operation of the service," YouTube said on its blog.

In addition to the monetary fine, the proposed settlement requires the company to create a system for identifying content aimed at children and to notify channel owners about their obligations to get consent from parents before collecting information on children.

FTC Chairman Joe Simons noted at a news conference on Wednesday what he said were important changes to YouTube business practices. "No other company in America is subject to these types of requirements and they will impose significant costs on YouTube," he told reporters.

FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection Director Andrew Smith told reporters that the $170 million settlement was based on revenues from data collected, times a multiplier. "It happens that $170 million is roughly the budget of the Bureau of Consumer Protection for one year," he added.

Once the settlement takes effect, the FTC plans to "conduct a sweep of the YouTube platform to determine whether there remains child-directed content" in which personal information is being collected, Smith said.

> "A financial settlement is no substitute for strict reforms that will stop Google and other tech companies from invading our privacy."
> Conn. Sen. Richard Blumenthal

The FTC could take actions against individual content creators or channel owners as a result.

In late August, YouTube announced it would launch YouTube Kids with separate niches for children depending on their ages and designed to exclude disturbing videos. It has no behavioral advertising.

YouTube allows companies to create channels, which include advertisements that create revenue for both the company and YouTube.

In its complaint, the government said that YouTube touted its popularity with children in marketing itself to companies like Mattel and Hasbro. It told Mattel that "YouTube is today's leader in reaching children age 6-11 against top TV channels," according to the complaint.

New York Attorney General Letitia James said the companies "abused their power."

"Google and YouTube knowingly and illegally monitored, tracked, and served targeted ads to young children just to keep advertising dollars rolling in," said James.

The two Democrats on the FTC, Rebecca Slaughter and Rohit Chopra, dissented from the settlement. Slaughter, who called the violations "widespread and brazen," said the settlement fails to require YouTube to police channels that provide children's content but do not designate it as such, thus allowing more lucrative behavioral advertising, which relies on tracking viewers through cookies.

Sens. Ed Markey and Richard Blumenthal, both Democrats active in online privacy matters, criticized the settlement in separate statements.

"A financial settlement is no substitute for strict reforms that will stop Google and other tech companies from invading our privacy," Blumenthal said. "I continue to be alarmed by Big Tech's policies and practices that invade children's lives." REUTERS

Changes coming soon to kids' content on YouTube:
Creators must tell YouTube if content targets kids
No tracking for ads (without parent's consent)
Kids can't comment (without parent's consent)

US judge wants quick review of sealed documents tied to Epstein

Lawyers for an anonymous man asked judge to keep names in docs secret.

A New York federal judge said on Wednesday she would move quickly in deciding whether to unseal hundreds of court documents linked to financier Jeffrey Epstein, who died last month while awaiting trial on sex-trafficking charges.

The documents are part of a civil lawsuit filed by one of Epstein's alleged victims, Virginia Giuffre, against Epstein's former associate, Ghislaine Maxwell. Giuffre has said Epstein and Maxwell trafficked her for sex while she was a teenager.

Giuffre sued Maxwell in 2015 and accused the British socialite of defaming her by calling her a liar. Maxwell has denied the claims, and the case settled on undisclosed terms earlier this year.

More than 900 court filings in the case remained secret until early August, when a federal appeals court unsealed about 2,000 pages of documents. The court ordered U.S. District Judge Loretta Preska to review each of the remaining documents to determine whether they should be unsealed.

At a hearing on Wednesday, Preska gave Giuffre, Maxwell and other interested parties two weeks to divide the documents into three categories. Preska said one category of documents — those that could have been used by a judge to decide core issues in the case — are most likely to be unsealed.

The parties will then have a chance to make arguments about what should be public and what should remain secret.

Jeffrey Pagliuca, Maxwell's lawyer, said at the hearing that the documents contained "hundreds" of names of people who would need to be notified and given a chance to object before they were made public.

On Tuesday, lawyers for an anonymous man urged Preska in a letter to keep the names of people who were not parties to the lawsuit secret.

Epstein was arrested on July 6 and pleaded not guilty to sex-trafficking charges. Prosecutors said he recruited numerous underage girls to give him massages and then sexually abused them.

The wealthy 66-year-old money manager was found dead on Aug. 10 in his cell at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Lower Manhattan. An autopsy concluded that he hanged himself. REUTERS

Divers recover bodies of all but one of 34 victims of California boat blaze

Divers have recovered the bodies of all but one of the 34 people who were killed when the dive boat they were sleeping in erupted into flames early this week off Santa Cruz Island, California, officials said on Wednesday.

Details of the victims, who ranged in age from 17 to 60, emerged while authorities worked to identify the remains of the 33 people recovered so far, using a DNA analysis tool that is primarily employed in war zones to generate results quickly.

A family of five, a teacher and his daughter, and a diving instructor and marine biologist were among those believed to have perished in the incident, according to social media posts.

The charred wreckage of the Conception now rests 60 feet below the surface. Divers were still searching for the remains of one person, said Amber Anderson of the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Office.

None of the victims has yet been officially identified.

The boat's captain and four crew members were above deck when the blaze broke out early on Monday and escaped in an inflatable boat. A crew member who was killed was apparently sleeping below deck with the passengers at the time.

Federal safety officials promised an exhaustive investigation of the fire on Tuesday.

National Transportation Safety Board member Jennifer Homendy said 16 investigators were already assigned to the probe, including specialists in operations, engineering, survival factors and fire analysis.

The investigators will collect all perishable evidence while on scene for at least a week, she said, but the Conception will remain on the ocean floor until a site survey is completed.

Among the other victims were Patricia Beitzinger and Neal Baltz, a couple from Arizona, who were passionate about diving and "died doing something that they loved together," Baltz's father John told local media.

Popi Heron, a 54-year-old finance professional from the San Francisco Bay area, had met them earlier this summer during a dive-boat trip in the South Pacific and they had hit it off instantly, she said in a phone interview.

"Even though I didn't know them very long, their humanity, their beauty as people, their passion as divers ... they're really just wonderful people and I am really going to miss them," she said.

The couple had invited Heron to join them on the Labor Day trip aboard the Conception, but she declined on concerns over the water being cold off California.

Hong Kong leader pulls extradition bill after months of protests

But withdrawal of bill only one of five demands by protesters.

Hong Kong leader Carrie Lam on Wednesday withdrew an extradition bill that triggered months of often violent protests so the Chinese-ruled city can move forward from a "highly vulnerable and dangerous" place and find solutions.

Her televised announcement came after Reuters reports on Friday and Monday revealing Beijing thwarted an earlier proposal from Lam to withdraw the bill and she had said privately that she would resign if she could.

"Lingering violence is damaging the very foundations of our society, especially the rule of law," a somber Lam said as she sat wearing a navy blue jacket and pink shirt with her hands folded on a desk.

It was not clear when the recording was made. The withdrawal needs the approval of the Legislative Council, which is not expected to oppose Lam.

The bill would have allowed extraditions to mainland China where courts are controlled by the Communist Party. Its withdrawal is a key demand of protesters but just one of five. The move came after pitched battles across the former British colony of 7 million. More than 1,000 protesters were arrested.

Many are furious about perceived police brutality and the number of arrests and want an independent inquiry.

"The government will formally withdraw the bill in order to fully allay public concerns," Lam said.

"I pledge that the government will seriously follow up the recommendations of the IPCC (Independent Police Complaints Council) report. From this month, I and my principal officials will reach out to the community to start a direct dialogue. ... We must find ways to address the discontent in society and look for solutions."

The protests began in March but snowballed in June and have evolved into a push for greater democracy for the city which returned to China in 1997. It was not clear if killing the bill would help end the unrest. The immediate reaction appeared skeptical.

"FIVE DEMANDS, NOT ONE MISSING"

Some lawmakers said the move should have come earlier.

"The damage has been done. The scars and wounds are still bleeding," said pro-democracy legislator Claudia Mo. "She thinks she can use a garden hose to put out a hill fire. That's not going to be acceptable."

Many people on street corners after nightfall were shouting: "Five demands, not one missing."

"We still have four other demands. We hope people won't forget that," said a woman speaking for the protest movement who declined to identify herself except by the surname Chan. "The mobilization power won't decrease."

Riot police fired beanbag guns and used pepper spray on Tuesday to clear demonstrators from outside the Mong Kok police station and in Prince Edward metro station.

The four other demands are: retraction of the word "riot" to describe rallies, release of all demonstrators, an independent inquiry into perceived police brutality, and the right for Hong Kong people to choose their own leaders.

In the United States, Republican Sen. Marco Rubio, a persistent critic of what he sees as Beijing's attempts to undermine Hong Kong's autonomy, called Lam's move "welcome but insufficient." REUTERS

VITO SPEAKS

Hey, "Larry." I happen to appreciate the poetic and lyrical pieces that have appeared under the Grumble. I don't recall any unicorns and rainbows, that's exaggerating and inaccurate. I do remember reading about the end of summer, Judy Garland, Woodstock, and other thoughtful pieces on life. I'd imagine most of them were sent in to the Humble.

I, personally, grow bored reading petty postings about dog droppings, subway irritants, slow street traffic, and half-full (or empty?) potato chip bags. I find many of the more poetic and lyrical postings celebrating people and events to be refreshing and much-needed in our toxic society. Life is short, Larry, in case you hadn't noticed. I'm quite fine with looking at the positives, whenever possible.

Brandi Carlile on leveling the playing field, one venue at a time

We spoke with the singer-songwriter ahead of her show at the Mann Center this Friday.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Brandi Carlile is not just paving a road with her good intentions, she's creating a brand-new highway from the ground up. With her tireless work ethic and hard-won success, the critically acclaimed and popularly adored singer-songwriter is playing to some of the biggest crowds of her career while trying to address issues of female representation that have tarnished the music industry for decades. With the momentum of taking home three Grammys for her 2018 album "By The Way, I Love You," Carlile will be touring throughout the remainder of the year playing such venues like Philly's Mann Center this Friday and Madison Square Garden in New York next week. I caught up with the singer to talk about her journey to this moment and the importance of using your platform for good.

Your 2018 record "By The Way, I Forgive You" seems like a record that needed to be made in our current us-versus-them landscape but will remain timeless after the fact. The two centerpieces of the album, "The Joke" and "The Mother," seem to be giving advice to your daughter Evangeline. Was that your feeling going into writing this record?

Yeah. And also, I think trying to be a salve or soothing in some way to parts of the world that felt not just slighted by change in the atmosphere that we all feel, but also kind of laughed at by it and picked on by it. You know, we ushered in a new realm I think of insensitivity and unkindness with our sort of political atmosphere and I was kind of feeling like, all right, laugh now, you know? And so, in the same way that you want your children to feel in school, like the era of bullying and being ostracized ends in redemption, I wanted people to feel the same way about the era of bullying and ostracization that's kind of tempering our country right now.

A lot of people look at an artist's trajectory as starting from their first releases but don't understand that getting to that release is a lifespan of an artist unto itself. Doing so well at the Grammys and now playing these large venues must seem like such a victory lap with that in mind.

Yeah, it's true. I mean, I'm only looking down the hill, you know? It's like, for some reason, both an impressive climb and look at it and go, God, that's steep. You know? And for some reason I've been able to approach the climb and look at it and go, that ain't that bad. This is actually really fun and gradual and then get to the top of it and look down and go, "holy s—t." It's like that for me. I have always felt like I'm on the brink of all my dreams coming true since I was like entering karaoke contests and s—t. You know, the thing is I'm not saying it hasn't been a struggle. I have washed my hair in a lot of gas station sinks and I've had a lot of unsavory times.

A big constant in your career has been your creative partnership with twin brothers Phil and Tim Hanseroth. You've referred to your partnership as being in a band that just happens to be called "Brandi Carlile." It seems like a really safe way to keep a good perspective on things.

Yeah, I think it's safe. People create characters all the time to do this job because it's a dangerous job. They change their name, they change the way they dress. They do something so that they can differentiate between who they are and who they're going to be. It doesn't mean they don't enjoy being that person on stage, or in the job, it just means that they have to have something to preserve. And whenever you are in something in and you call it your name, I think you have to be really, really careful. And for me and the twins, it was accidental that it wound up being that way, you know? It was just the way it was at the restaurant and busing level that we started when we met and when we got our record deal, we just didn't consider it. But then it developed into starting stuff about publishing. We put the brakes on and we were like, "Whoa, whoa, whoa. Let's make this Brandi Carlile thing an even split, no matter what we do, even though it's called, you know, Brandi Carlile." Nobody's possessive over their intellectual property or over their name or recognition. So we've split it up that way. Knowing that my name wasn't leaving me anymore in that way. Which is good, because I never really liked my name. That sounds conceptually really strange, I think, on the outside. But when you do this with twins, you have to understand that they're kind of ... not in a negative way, but like codependent by default. They don't even have their own face. So it's like when you enter into this kind of thing with them and you say, listen, we're all "Brandi Carlile."

Whether through your charity work or addressing the issue of female representation at major festivals with your Girls Just Wanna Festival, you have always used your platform for good. How important do you think it is to lead by example in that way?

I think it's ethically important. I mean, so first of all, the twins have never balked at it for one second. Even before discussing feminism and representation, which was cool and being discussed in the mainstream. They never once questioned that. I think always been powerful to see these two 6-foot tattooed men standing behind and backing up a woman singer vocally. It's really fundamentally supportive in a really powerful way. So I think that's really important for women to see, to a certain extent. We spend a lot of time being background singers, playing tambourines or being this kind of utility player. The girl in the band. It's a role reversal of that. And then representation as a whole, I see as a really important problem because people know the work that I've done for refugees and displaced people has given me perspective on what we cry persecution about. I think we have to be really careful about that. I think that representation, on a level as it pertains to my daughters, is important because women and men are so different that there is an entire part, in fact, half of the story of the human race not being told with music right now in the way that it should be in the numbers that it should be told in. That's a big thing that affects young people. I know that I found huge parts of my identity in the arts. I don't know that I would have a family or would be married if I weren't told by people like me in the arts that it's possible. And so I just think it's really important that you take a good, hard look at particularly the genres that are extremely exclusive right now, like the roots and country.

With that being said, what is the story behind your new supergroup, The Highwomen, with Marrin Morris, Amanda Shires and Natalie Hemby? It seems like you are putting the country music world on notice.

We're trying to tell the stories that we felt we needed to hear to be the people that we are. And some — some women, some girls in rural parts of America — only have access to country music. That's all they're allowed to listen to. That was where I was in my childhood at the time, and even though I didn't have very many gay women singers in my youth, just the women's stories, just stories of women coming of age are really important to young girls. The Dixie Chicks were really important to young girls. So we're trying to be that thing for our daughters and hopefully open the door so that more people can be that thing, you know?

Make sure to catch Brandi Carlile at the Mann Center this Friday, Sept. 6.

Boyds Beauty launched last week. LUKE PLATA

Boyds recently launched their new beauty section featuring exclusive products.

MOLLY GIVEN

Center City's luxury department store Boyds is known for its wide range of clothing items and in-house tailors, but now Boyds is delving into another hot market — beauty.

For the first time in the store's history, Boyds will be offering a wide range of beauty brands for both females and males, some of which are exclusive to the store in the City of Brotherly Love.

"When choosing brands, we wanted to provide luxury brands that women identify with, but we also selected brands who create products with integrity, some of whom give back to the community and are environmentally sustainable," said Director of New Business Development Missy Dietz in a release. "We're very excited for the Boyds Beauty launch and we look forward to expanding our capabilities that we've expertly tailored to the needs of our customers."

Boyds Beauty launched last week, and already Philadelphians have been taking advantage of the quality products being offered in the store. The 1,500-square-foot section on the main floor of the store features a curated inventory of high-end cosmetics, fragrance and skincare products. Boyds Beauty includes products from Tata Harper, Maison Francis Kurkdjian Paris, Atelier Cologne, Agustinus Bader and Creed. According to the release, Boyds Beauty is the first and only retailer to carry products from The Laundress NY, Hush & Dotti, Kevyn Aucoin and Kjaer Weis in the city as well.

The new beauty section of the store comes after a massive $10-million-dollar renovation which was completed less than a year ago. Boyds is continuing its objective of continually advancing the store's efficiency and repertoire with the launch of Boyds Beauty and with future plans for spa treatments and a fourth-floor expansion featuring eveningwear and personal shopping space.

"We understand the need to grow with the needs of our customers and our primary goal is to create a one-stop, experiential retail environment for Boyds shoppers," said Kent Gushner, president and third-generation owner of Boyds in a release. "Beauty is unchartered territory for us, but through our ability to know, understand, and evolve with our clientele, we are confident that this new department will be successful."

Aqimero's new Grill Works menu features flavorful dishes like you've never seen before. MOLLY GIVEN

When you walk into The Ritz-Carlton Hotel snuggly located next to City Hall and Broad Street, you most likely expect a grandiose lobby with high ceilings, chic decor and elegant comfort. You certainly do get all of that when you enter through the doors, but with the hotel's smartly stylish eatery, Aqimero, you also get so much more.

Aqimero has stood as a notable eatery in the City of Brotherly Love for years, and just recently the hot spot's Executive Chef, Vincent Giannini, launched a menu with savory items all hand-crafted on their new gadget, the Grillworks Langlier 42– which also happens to be the only one located in Philadelphia.

Giannini spent months researching unique flavors and complimentary combinations with critically acclaimed chef and global restaurateur Richard Sandoval to find the perfect dishes to spotlight on the menu. According to the release, the menu is filled with contemporary wood-fire cuisine that draws inspiration from farm-fresh ingredients and features Latin flavors 'ranging' from Brazilian to Venezuelan. Both Giannini and Sandoval also found it important to use local fare to be featured, including poultry and dry-aged steaks from Bucks County Bounty and Indian Ridge Provisions.

"Working with Richard Sandoval, local ingredients and a powerful wood-fired grill has been a great experience as a chef. The updated menu lets us utilize the new grill to the fullest," says Chef Vincent in a release. "We've added more dishes and components that come off the grill with a nice wood-fired flavor and beautiful char."

Menu highlights include ceviche amarillo (served with kampachi, aji, mango and serrano pepper–$16), street corn tostadas (served with bi-color corn, queso fresco, cotija, brown butter and tarragon–$12) grilled Spanish octopus (served with potatoes, salsa verde, confit tomato and olive caramel–$18), wood-roasted prawns (served with chorizo and roasted peppers–$28), Yellowfin tuna (served with hearts of

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

Before we get to tonight's big NFL opener (traditionally the most bet-on non-playoff game of the pro football season), I should remind you about our limited-time offer to obtain a free $50 VISA gift card and up to $250 in risk-free bonus money at MetroBet.us/Sugar.

All you have to do is:

Betting on rookie head coaches, like Green Bay's Matt LaFleur, to succeed on the road against a good team in Week 1 is as bad a bet as betting on the Redskins to win this season's Super Bowl.

It's a textbook football betting no-no, and we only have to look back at Week 1 of last season for evidence. Rookie head coaches went 0-7 in their first games last September.

Now, it's easy to say that, "yeah, but none of those rookie coaches had Aaron Rodgers on their side." However, if you dig deeper on Rodgers you start to see that he might truly be on the decline.

GETTY IMAGES

The Packers are 10-12-1 in the last 23 games Rodgers has started.

There has also been recent chatter that Rodgers and LaFleur are already bickering over how much freedom Rodgers will have with audible calls, which is largely why the relationship between former Pack head coach Mike McCarthy and Rodgers soured over time.

Despite these trends on Green Bay, many are pointing back to the fact that the Packers beat the Bears in Week 1 last year. But … that was a home game for the Packers, who did not cover the -7 spread as it was a 24-23 Green Bay win.

The Bears did not have a great offseason, as they lost defensive coordinator Vic Fangio, as well as safety Adrian Amos (to the Packers of all teams). Those losses, however, should not mean Chicago will drop out of the top 5 in defensive rankings (the Bears finished first in least ppg allowed last year, giving up just 17.7).

This is still a phenomenal defensive unit, with an offense that should slightly improve from last year now that Matt Nagy has a full year under his belt.

The play: $10 on Bears -3 at MetroBet.us/Sugar

TWEET OF THE DAY

Another big Super Bowl bet: SuperBook USA took $9,500 on Carolina Panthers at 50-1 odds, per @vegasmurray. Bet would win $475,000. A believer in Cam Newton's health.

Best Bets

NFL Week 1: Colts at Chargers

Andrew Luck's sudden retirement was a devastating blow to the Colts' playoff chances, but Jacoby Brissett was competent under center in 2017 with a core far worse than the one he has at his disposal in Week 1 against LA. Brissett proved to be an effective dual-threat in the pocket in 2017, tossing 13 TDs while rushing for another four. Playing behind the NFL's fifth-best offensive line, Brissett should post a better TD-INT ratio than 13-7 and a better completion rate than his already-respectable 58.8 percent.

T.Y. Hilton remains Indy's best wide out, but second-round draft pick Parris Campbell and free-agent pickup Devin Funchess are ready to step up as reliable second and third options. Marlon Mack averaged 75.67 yards per game on the ground last year and is poised for another solid campaign.

GETTY IMAGES

As for their defense, the Colts were 11th in yards allowed per game last year and improved by signing Justin Houston to complement their line. The Chargers are a solid squad all-around, but they'll be without Melvin Gordon and are just 1-6-1 against the spread in their last eight September games.

The play: Colts +7

Metro predictions: Saints bring Lombardi Trophy back to Big Easy

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

America's most popular sport is back as the NFL's 100th season kicks off tonight at Soldier Field in Chicago as the Bears host the Green Bay Packers. Before we get into our full Eagles tomorrow, Metro predicts how the 2019 campaign will play out.

NFC EAST

EAGLES.....11-5
COWBOYS.10-6
GIANTS.....5-11
REDSKINS..4-12

PLAYER TO WATCH
CARSON WENTZ
QB, EAGLES

The Cowboys are going to be a scary team, especially now that Ezekiel Elliott's holdout is over and he's ready to join the team Week 1. But this will be the year Carson Wentz stays healthy and puts on a full, MVP-like performance to carry the Eagles to a division title.

NFC NORTH

PACKERS.12-4
BEARS.....11-5
VIKINGS..9-7
LIONS.....6-10

AARON RODGERS
QB, PACKERS

This is going to be a three-horse race for much of the season. High-flying offenses in Green Bay and Minnesota will be stalked by a strong defense in Chicago. The x-factor will be the Aaron Rodgers-to-Davante Adams connection that will see the Packers return to the top of the NFC North.

NFC SOUTH

SAINTS.....13-3
FALCONS...9-7
PANTHERS.7-9
BUCS.....4-12

PLAYER TO WATCH
ALVIN KAMARA
RB, SAINTS

New Orleans is loaded and fueled by last year's controversial postseason loss to the Los Angeles Rams. Drew Brees will thrive in an overwhelming offense supported by Alvin Kamara and Michael Thomas while the defense could be a top 10 unit in the NFL.

NFC WEST

RAMS.....12-4
SEAHAWKS..9-7
49ERS.....7-9
CARDINALS.3-13

AARON DONALD
DT, RAMS

Jared Goff will continue his development as a top-tier quarterback in the NFL, Todd Gurley will be one of the league's leading rushers, and Aaron Donald will win another Defensive Player of the Year award. If not for the Saints and Packers, they would be going back to the Super Bowl.

AFC EAST

PATRIOTS..12-4
JETS.....8-8
BILLS.....4-12
DOLPHINS.2-14

PLAYER TO WATCH
LE'VEON BELL
RB, JETS

The end is near for the Patriots, just not yet. Tom Brady and Co. will be one of the top teams in the AFC once again and should dominate the East for at least another season. Watch out for the Jets, however, as the reloading team will look dangerous.

AFC NORTH

BROWNS...11-5
STEELERS...10-6
RAVENS.....7-9
BENGALS....5-11

PLAYER TO WATCH
ODELL BECKHAM JR.
WR, BROWNS

All eyes are going to be on the brash Browns this year. Expect them to deliver. Baker Mayfield has monster targets in Odell Beckham Jr. and Jarvis Landry on offense. On defense, Myles Garrett could be a Player of the Year candidate.

AFC SOUTH

COLTS.....10-6
TEXANS...9-7
TITANS....7-9
JAGUARS.5-11

PLAYER TO WATCH
DEANDRE HOPKINS
WR, TEXANS

Andrew Luck's retirement certainly threw a wrench in the Colts' plans this year. Alongside a strong defense, QB Jacoby Brissett should be a competent game manager while the likes of Marlon Mack and T.Y. Hilton make the big-time plays in Indy.

AFC WEST

CHIEFS.....14-2
CHARGERS.11-5
RAIDERS.....5-11
BRONCOS...4-12

PLAYER TO WATCH
PATRICK MAHOMES
QB, CHIEFS

Even though their defense hasn't been improved much, the Chiefs are still one of the scariest teams in the NFL. Patrick Mahomes will build off his stellar rookie campaign and should once again be an MVP candidate. Expect huge numbers from him.

Serena two wins from historic title at 2019 US Open

When Serena Williams won her first Grand Slam title at the U.S. Open in 1999, Bill Clinton was the President, Enrique Iglesias had the No. 1 song in America and Andre Agassi was about to win the men's title in New York.

While Clinton, Iglesias, and Agassi are all absent from the headlines now, Williams is still making news and stands two victories from winning her 24th career Grand Slam title 20 years after she won her first.

Serena Williams cruised to the U.S. Open semis on Tuesday. GETTY IMAGES

"It's cool to kind of have these opportunities to think about," Williams said after routing Qiang Wang of China, 6-1, 6-0 in 44 minutes Tuesday night for her 100th win at the Open. "I'm not thinking about that yet because I'm still in it, I'm still playing, I'm still doing what I can do."

Williams, who turns 38 this month, will enjoy what she does a lot more if she can win two more matches and finally tie Margaret Court with her 24th major. Since becoming a mother to daughter Olympia two years ago. Williams is 0-3 in Grand Slam finals, including losing the controversial final to Naomi Osaka last year in New York.

Another loss here in the semis or finals could be crushing.

Next up she will face No. 5 seed Elina Svitolina of the Ukraine. Williams is 4-1 against Svitolina, with her only loss coming in the 2016 Olympics.

"That was a tough Olympics for me," Williams recalled. "Oh, man. Lost in doubles for the first time. Just really devastated about that doubles loss. Then obviously singles shortly after."

Svitolina is playing some of her best tennis and hasn't dropped a set in the tournament. Along the way, she has taken out Venus Williams, Serena's big sister, and Madison Keys, a finalist here in 2017.

"She is obviously a fighter," Serena said of Svitolina. "She gets a lot of balls back. She doesn't make a lot of mistakes. She's one of those players that does everything really well. So I have to do everything well, too."

Said Svitolina: "Definitely it's a big challenge to play against her. Obviously, Serena is an amazing champion. Probably it's going to be really tough against her."

Svitolina is also dating Frenchman Gael Monfils, who was set to play in the men's quarterfinals on Wednesday afternoon against Italian Matteo Berrettini.

"I think hitting with Gael Monfils has really helped her game," ESPN's Chrissie Evert said on air of Svitolina. "I think they've helped each other."

On the other half of the draw, a first-time finalist is certain to emerge.

No. 13 Belinda Bencic was set to meet No. 23 Donna Vekic in one quarterfinal Wednesday afternoon, with No. 15 Bianca Andreescu taking on No. 25 Elise Mertens in the other quarter Wednesday night.

After her dominating performance Tuesday night while wearing a skin-tight black outfit, Williams' intimidation factor appeared sky-high. She hit 25 winners against Wang, while Wang had zero. Some fans were still settling into their seats when Williams finished off her opponent.

"No, I don't try to up any intimidation factor," Williams said. "I am who I am. I've always been the person that goes out there and roars and screams and complains and cries and fights."

"I'm extremely passionate about what I do. Most people that love their jobs are passionate about what they do. That's just me."

That passion has helped sustain her at the top of women's tennis for two decades. When she won her first U.S. Open title 20 years ago, Williams beat Lindsay Davenport in the semis and Martina Hingis in the final.

Davenport, 43, and Hingis, 38, are both long retired.

Williams is still here, fending off yet another generation of challengers.

She's widely considered the GOAT of women's tennis but needs two more wins to get to No. 24 and tie Court in the history books.

"I'm pretty much ready for everything," she said. ADAM ZAGORIA at 9:00AM to enforce the court judgment of $246,444.24 obtained by Bank of New York Mellon Trust Company, N.A. as Trustee for Mortgage Assets Management Series I Trust against you.

NOTICE OF OWNER'S RIGHTS
YOU MAY BE ABLE TO PREVENT THIS SHERIFF'S SALE

To prevent this Sheriff's Sale you must take immediate action:
1. The sale will be cancelled if you pay back to Bank of New York Mellon Trust Company, N.A. as Trustee for Mortgage Assets Management Series I Trust the amount of the judgment plus costs or the back payments, late charges, costs, and reasonable attorneys fees due. To find out how much you must pay, you may call: (610) 278-6800.
2. You may be able to stop the sale by filing a petition asking the Court to strike or open the judgment, if the judgment was improperly entered. You may also ask the Court to postpone the sale for good cause.
3. You may be able to stop the sale through other legal proceedings.
4. You may need an attorney to assert your rights. The sooner you contact one, the more chance you will have of stopping the sale. (See notice on page two of how to obtain an attorney.)

YOU MAY STILL BE ABLE TO SAVE YOUR PROPERTY AND YOU HAVE OTHER RIGHTS EVEN IF THE SHERIFF'S SALE DOES TAKE PLACE.
5. If the Sheriff's Sale is not stopped, your property will be sold to the highest bidder. You may find out the price bid by calling (610) 278-6800.
6. You may be able to petition the Court to set aside the sale if the bid price was grossly inadequate compared to the value of your property.
7. The sale will go through only if the buyer pays the Sheriff the full amount due in the sale. To find out if this has happened you may call 215-686-3535.
8. If the amount due from the buyer is not paid to the Sheriff, you will remain the owner of the property as if the sale never happened.
9. You have a right to remain in the property until the full amount due is paid to the Sheriff and the Sheriff gives a deed to the buyer. At that time, the buyer may bring legal proceedings to evict you.
10. You may be entitled to a share of the money, which was paid for your house. A schedule of distribution of the money bid for your house will be filed by the Sheriff no later than thirty days after the Sheriff Sale. This schedule will state who will be receiving the money. The money will be paid out in accordance with this schedule unless exceptions (reasons why the proposed distribution is wrong) are filed with the Sheriff within ten (10) days after the date of filing of said schedule.
11. You may also have other rights and defenses or ways of getting your house back, if you act immediately after the sale.

YOU SHOULD TAKE THIS PAPER TO YOUR LAWYER AT ONCE. IF YOU DO NOT HAVE A LAWYER OR CANNOT AFFORD ONE, GO TO OR TELEPHONE THE OFFICE LISTED BELOW TO FIND OUT WHERE YOU CAN GET LEGAL HELP.
